CONTRACTOR CONTRACTOR

PREFACE.

The per to make in the Circle of the School Tongues, is to the Italian. The near Affinity that reigns between that and the Spanish, which was the Subject of the former Grammar, makes it a very natural and easy Step from one to the other.

This is one of the most Polite Tongues in the World, and, except the Greek may come in Competition, is certainly the most Tuneful. The Softness of the Language, that glides so much upon Vowels, gives it a Turn for Musick that is peculiarly bappy: And this must be owing partly to the Natural Genius, the Climate, and, without doubt, to something particular in the Organs of the People that speak it. For these are some of those Causes that influence more or less every Tongue, and Mould of all Languages, which we may observe by a very ready Comparison. To this is owing the Vogue and the Multitude of their Opera's; a barbarous Composition in it self, unknown to the Ancients, out of all Nature as well as Rule; affording no Pleasure to those that love to have a Reason for being pleas'd, except what arises barely from the Charms of Sound, the Graces of Action, and the Embellishments of the Scenery.

This Tongue is now deservedly in great Esteem, and has been always much admir'd and studied since the Days of Petrarch, and the Resinement of it by Boccacio. It is thought to be spoken in the greatest Perfection at Rome and Siena's whence the Proverb, Lingua Toscana in bocca Romana; implying, that the Privity of it is Toscan, and the true University of it is the University of it is rance is Roman.

As there is in every Country some Place where the Living Tongue is the most perfect, that is, among the Knowing, both for Standard and Utterance, Writing and Conver-

Conversation; as, for instance, Toledo is esteem'd the Local Standard of the Spanish; Blois of the French; London of the English; Leipfick of the High Dutch, &c. so Rome and Siena of the Italian; one for the Delicacy of the Longue, the other for the Justness of Pronouncing.

The chief Beauty of it, is the Ease, the Smoothness, and the Harmony of it. Tho? some are of Opinion, that the almost perpetual Ending in Vowels, as it is an Advantage in Musick, is rather a Defect upon other Occasions: That it tires the Ear, in Talk or Writing, with an endless Repetition of the same Sounds; makes the Longue too open, languid, and effeminate; incapable of a due Strength and Boldness, as well as of that Variety of Notes, proper to the different Nature of Things describ'd, that is requir'd in good Poetry. That it gives also a Lengthening to each Word, that renders it something tedious in Conversation, and rather fit for the formal Part of the World like the Italians, than common Intercourse. Which is one ReaReason, as they urge, why it must yield to the French in the Conversable Part: That being a Speech that is much readier, and goes more nimbly off the Tongue than any Language in the World; and upon that Account, among some others, is the most in Request for general Use.

As both this and the Spanish are thought very justly in the main to be a Corruption of the Latin, so they both agree remarkably in one Thing, which is, this same Lengthening of the Words. The Cause of this Change, in Nature and Philosophy, it. is impossible to trace exactly; unless it may be conjectur'd to arise from the Manners, the grave Temper, and solemn Address of the People, that brought them to dwell longer upon each Word, and draw out the Syllables with a Slowness that anwer'd their natural Character. And perhaps the like Difference in all other Tongues, if compar'd with one another, may be likely enough accounted for by the same Principle.

It is, like all other Tongues, varied by several Dialects: The most remote from the Standard, in Purity as well as Place, is that of the Mountains; which is subdivided again into others; that as they approach more or less to the French, German or Italian Frontier, partake more or less in Proportion of the Tongue of the Neighbouring Country.

Every State or Sovereignty has likewise its different Dialect, or Cast of Speech; like the Governments of Ancient Greece. And each of these Dialects, in this as well as all other Tongues, is commonly nearer to Perfection, or farther from it, as it lies in Nearness to the Local Standard.

This Tongue has been still improving since Petrarch, and in every Stage of Improvement has pass'd thro' much Alteration. Hence arises the Difference between the Ancient and Modern Authors; that Words are found in some, which now are disus'd; and that many Words still retain'd, are chang'd in the Orthography, or Manner of Writing. The same has been the Fate of all other Tongues, that have been at all cultivated.

The Original of the Italian, is, the Latin grafted upon the old Italian during the Roman Empire, and taking a new Turn and Mixture from the Lombards, the Goths, the Spaniards, and the Greeks themselwes, (as in the East of Naples) in the Decline of that Empire. So that the Basis of it is the old Italian; and the rest is Latin corrupted, with a Vein of the Lombard, Gothick, Spanish, and Greek Languages, in several Parts of Italy. And the old Italian it self was various, according to the various Provinces of Old Italy: One of which was Latium; whose Tongue, the Latin, by the Advance of Fortune, came to have the largest Share in this, the Spanish, and the French Tongues; occasion'd by a nearer and more frequent Commerce with the Latins, or People of Latium, and a conjuin Subjection to them.

The Latin took its Model very much from the Greek, which was spoken anciently in Calabria, or Gracia Magna: And this is one Cause why the Neapolitan Dialect of the Italian has a Mixture with the Greek, from its Neuroess to Calabria. And it is very probable, that the immediate Ground of this Tongue in the old Italian, was in the ancient Hetrurian or Toscan; because the present Toscan is the Standard of the Italian. We have now some Monuments of the old Hetrurian, in several Inscriptions upon some Columns in Rome, &c. The old Oscan, Sabine, and Messanian Tongues in Italy were akin to it; and other Dialects.

Many Words of this Hetrurian occur in Ennius, Varro, Festus, Plautus, Arnobius, 1. 7. adv. Gen. &c. and later Antiquaries and Grammarians.

But it is not only by single Hands that the Italian has been refin'd; but Sets of Men have applied themselves to the Polishing of it, in the manner of the French Academy. The Academia della Crasca has made a good Progress in that Affair. As there are several Bodies of Men in Italy, that go by the Name of Academics, who devote themselves to the Improvement of certain Branches of Knowledge; each to one Part, in their principal Cities and Universities.

I have hinted the Variety of Dialects, into which the Italian is divided, occasion'd by the Number of States and Governments: The Chief are, the Toscan, Roman, Venetian, Milanese, Neapolitan, Calabrian, Piemontese, Genoese, and those of the Islands, Corsica, Sicilia, Malta, &c.

For the rest, the Reader must have Recourse to their Criticks, and most approv'd Authors; as, Dante, Boccacio, Guarini, Guicciardini, Tasso, Marini, Caro, Bentivoglio, Davila, Boccalini, Ferrante, Pallavicino, Assarino, Mascardi, Segneri, Bartoli, &c.

One Remark more may be added; That the Language of the Common Poople in all Tongues is to be avoided, for it is always corrupt and base: As it is observed, That tho' Rome and Siena are the Places where the best Italian is spoken; yet the common People among the Florentines, for Instance, speak in the most har sh and improper manner, and with an ill Accent.

A is broader than the English; like pawn; as, pane.

C before a, o, u, is ka, ko, ku: Before e, i, it is tche, tchi; as, Cena, tchena; like the English Ch in Cheese: But the t is pronounc'd very gently, except the c be doubled; as, accettuare, atchettuare.

Ci before a, e, o, u, is but one Syllable with them, i being scarce heard; as, ciascuno, tchiascuno.

Ce, ci, cia, cie, cio, ciu, having s before them, are pronounc'd, she, shi, shia, &c.

Che, chi, are ke, ki.

E is sometimes open; as, fiéle, like mealy; sometimes close, as bello, like mellow.

G before e or i, between two Vowels, is dge, dgi; as, regente, redgente; else it is je, ji, as género. So two gg; as, oggetto, odgetto.

G hefore l, is l; as, orgoglio, orgollio. Except Inglese, globo, negligenza, negletto, conglutinare, glosa.

Gna, gne, gno, gnu, gni, are, nnia, nnie, nnio, nniu, nni. As, regno, rénnio; incognito, inconnito.

Gh is like gu English; as, luoghi, logui.

Gua, gue, gui, are ga, ge, gi.

G is doubled in Infinitives, if there be a Vowel before gere; as, leggere.

H is no Aspirate in this Tongue; as, hora, ora.

Tis only a Note of Distinction; as, suno, happo.

I is ee; as, vino, veeno. For J. Consonant is put G; as, Giovanni, John.

O is either open, as, torre, to take away, like Torrent, English, or close, as Torre, a Tower, like Turret. It is close, when it is accented; as, amo; in the Endings, one, ora, ore, oro, oso; except u goes before: And before l, m, n, r, except i or u come before: And before gn, as, Bologna, Bologna.

Q, always with u, is k; and is sounded smartly when c goes before it, as acqua, ackwa.

S, if a Vowel goes before, is z; as, casa, caza. Except cosa, cosi, cossa, cossi.

If a Consonant comes before f, it is f; as, ar so, ar so.

S before d, g, t, m, n, r, u, in the Beginning, is x; as, frarra, zbarra: Before i in the End, it is f: Before c, f, p, t, it is pronounc'd in its natural Sound.

S in Cosa, a Thing; rosa, gnaw'd, is as sa int salute.

The Neapolitaus pronounce cosi, cousi, which must be avoided.

The Sicilians, Neapolitans, and Florentines pronounce \int between two Vowels, like Sa in Saturn; but this is condemn'd.

If S with a Consonant begins a word, the word before must end in a Vowel, or i must be set before f; as, bello studio, in iscuola.

Ti before a, e, o, is the; as, gratia, gratha. Except malatia, simpatia, natio, giurisditione, &c. which are pronounc'd naturally.

Some for t write z; as grazia for gratia, &c. This is faulty.

U is on; as, virtu, virtoù: As the English too in Tooth.

U before o is not pronounc'd; as, cuore, core. Except duo, tuo, suo, virtuoso, &c. where the u and o make two Syllables.

Vu is pronounc'd like plain u; as, avuezzo, avezzo.

Z is ts, except it be fingle between two Vowels; and in Zona, Zodiaco, Lazaro, mezzo, mezo, zigrino, rozza, &c. where it is ds, as dsona, &c.

Xanto, a Man's Name, is found written with X, to distinguish it from Santo, Holy: Tho' X, T, K, W, are not in the Italian Alphabet.

K is call'd by the Tuscans, Kappa, or Chappa; X, Iccase; T, Isilon, or T Graca.

Instead of k, ch is us'd; instead of ph, f.

Consonants are doubled in the Beginning of Compound words; as appresso. We write diffendere, or difendere; but always difesa.

Z after a Consonant, is single; between two Vowels, is double: Except Lazaro. V. g. Speranza, pozzo.

DIPHTHONGS are, Ai, au, ei, io, iu, ua, ue, ui; in which both Vowels must be pronounc'd distinctly in one Syllable; as, mai, never.

If io, ia, make but one Syllable, g is doubled; as, raggio; else not, as privilegio.

The Accent is either Grave, on the End of a word, as amarò, maestà, virtù, and the like; and in some Monosyllables in o or a, as dò, dà; or Acute, on the last Syllable but one or two, as pazzia, giudice; or Circumstex, on the last, or last but one, when a Syllable is cut away; as, andáro, sor andárono, they went.

All 3d Persons Plural of regular Verbs, except in the Future Tense, have the Accent upon the last Syllable but two; as, gódono.

Some have it on the last but three; as, venitosene, racommandándomegli, &c. And so have all the 3d Persons Plural of the Present Indicative, which have the Accent in the first Person on the last but three; as, significo, significano.

The Accent is always mark'd in some Tenses; as, amò, dormi, riderò, &c. And in some other words; costi, ciò, fù, &c.

Sometimes two Vowels are pronounc'd in one Sound; as fiume, with many others; and sometimes severally, as diéta, &c.

Three Vowels likewise are often pronounc'd in one Sound; as, miei, Padoua; and others.

If in, con, per, non, come before a word beginning with S, I is set before S; as in Ispagna,

The Accent is set usually according to the Latin.

There

There are Two Figures chiefly incident to words; Apostrophe, and Apocope.

Apostrophe is, when the last Vowel of lo, la, le, de, di, da, mi, ti, si, gli, vi, ne, che, se, is taken away; the word to which they are join'd beginning with a Vowel; as, t'amo. But the Article gli before a, e, i, o, u, is better without Apostrophe; as, gli Angeli.

We find l'Omporio, for l'Imperio; l'Ensidie, for l'Insidie: This is faulty.

Che before the Verb havere, loses both e and h; as, c'hà egli fatto?

Pie' for piede, me' for meglio.

Il loses i after a word ending in a Vowel; as, sopra'l, for sopra il; and l'sometimes, as, Iddio.

I in dei, dai, ai, is cut off thus; de', da', a'.

Sometimes lo suffers an Elision, even before a Consonant; as, nel, sel, vel, for non lo, selo, velo.

Apccope is the Removal of a Vowel before a Consonant, when l, m, n, r, t, d, goes before a Vowel in the last Syllable; as, simil', amar', for simile, amare; habbiam', posson', for habbiamo, possono; potro' for potero, and the like.

But all Words that end a Sentence, are written at Length. So are all Words before a Comma, or other Point: As, quell' buomo è grande; not gran.

So are words in a, before a Consonant; except bera; an Adverb, and ancora; as, hor sù; ancor non. But bella Mano, not bell' mano; and the like.

Words accented are never abridg?.

The Plural should not be retrench'd, if I comes before the last Letter; as, parole scelte: But the Singular often may.

Tenses of Verbs are often retrench'd.

It is more elegant not to retrench the Infinitive before a Vowel; as, parlare alto.

Some others are never abbreviated; as, Apollo, Chiaro, duro, &c.

Words in ca, co, ga, go, require h after c and g, if the word following begins with a Vowel: As, Anch' Io, I also.

There are many other Contractions; as, al, for à il; ai, à, for alli; madonna, for mia donna; frà, for frà li; borrevole, for bonorevole; and a Number of others, that are contracted always in Discourse, tho' sometimes written at Length.

Some words are differently written by the Ancient and Modern Authors; as, Laude, Lode, &c.

With, and into, are express'd by con, and in: Thus, with, con; With the, col, collo, coll', colla, co, coi, cogli, colle. In, into, in. In the, nel, nello, nell', nella, ne', negli, nelle.

Con is us'd before a Possessive Pronoun, follow'd by a Noun of Quality or Parentage; as, con vostra Altezza, con mia madre. Con il, con la, must be avoided.

Sometimes the Possessive Pronoun is set after the Noun; and then in is us'd, for nel, nello, &c. As, in Camera mia.

Il before a Verb, is chang'd into lo; as, Io lo só, I know it.

Lo, la, li, le, are set after the Infinitive, or the Gerund; as, amarlo, parlando li. So in eccolo, eccola, eccoli, eccole; There he is, &c.

Improper Articles, set before proper Names, have Three Cases Singular only: As, Gen. di. Dat. à. Abl. da.

Some words are both Masculine and Feminine; as, il, or la siume.

Nouns end in a Vowel.

Nouns in a Feminine, make the Plural in e; as, donna, donne.

Ca and ga take an b before e Plural; as, fatica, fatiche; paga, paghe.

English Substantives in ty, ending in ta in Italian, keep a in the Plural; as, la Città, le Città. Some make e or i; as, ala, arma, ale, or ali, arme, or armi.

Masculines in a, change a into i in the Plural; as, Poeta, Poeti. And all Masculines make the Plural in i.

E.

Nouns in e make the Plural in i; as, Padre, Padri: Except re, specie, temperie, effigie, superficie; which have the Plural as the Singular.

Mille makes Mila in the Plural.

I.

Nouns in i have the same in the Plural: As, il lunedi, i lunedi. And so have all Words that are accented.

0.

Nouns in o, change o into i in the Plural; as, libro, libri.

Dissyllables in co and go, make the Phiral chi and ghi; as, suoco, suochi. Except medico, porco, Greco, &c. which make ci.

Some in o make the Plural better in a than i; as, labro, --ra; ciglio, --ia; anello,--la; dito, --ta; membro, -ra, &c.

Some have both o and e Singular; as, vermo, verme.

Words in io cast away i, or double it in the Plural; as, occhio, tempio, occhi, tempii. Huomo makes huomini.

Some in a make ci and gli. Many have both i and it Plural. Some are seldom us'd but in the Plural.

or proper Names.

U.

Nouns in u have the Phral and Singular alike.
Nouns in are end better in aio; as, Genaro,

Nouns in ero end better in eie; as, Cavaliero, Cavaliere.

The Genders of Nouns may be seen best in the Didionary.

Nouns are declin'd by the foregoing Articles, and the Cases are alike in each Number. If the Noun begins with a Vowel, the concluding Vowel of the Article before it is cut off; as, I' Amore.

Observe

Observe the first Letters of Nouns, to give them the proper Article: As, Lo studio, gli studi, &c. L'honore, gli honori, &c. L'honesta, le honeste; La regina, le regine; Il librò, i libri, &c.

Il is set before a single Consonant, as Il cavallo.

Lo before a double Consonant, as, Lo studio.

Gli before a double Consonant, or a Vowel; as Gli amori.

I before a single Consonant, especially 1; as, I libri.

La or Le before either.

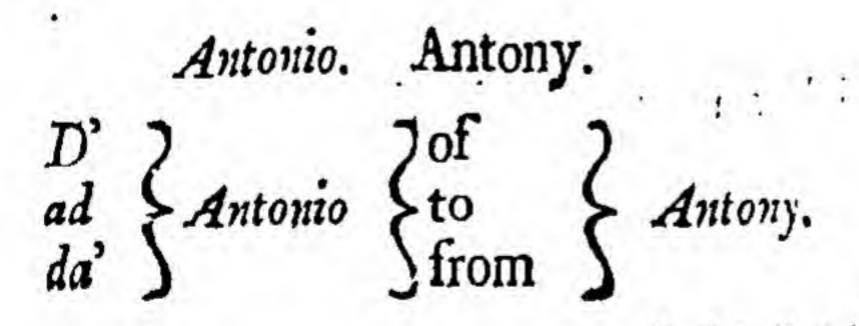

Il before f, if a Vowel follows; as, Il soldato.

Lo before Masculines beginning with a Vowel, or H, with an Apostrophe; as, L'honore.

But Lo in the Plural is not abridged, unless i follows; as, gli honori, gl'ingegni: Nor La, unless e follows.

Li, delli, alli, dalli, are out of use.

Proper Names are thus declin'd, and have com-

Anna.

da' Londra.

These, di, a' or ad, de, are called Indefinite Articles, and may be set before any Nouns.

Proper Names of Kingdoms, Provinces, Seas, Rivers and Mountains, are generally thus declin'd:

The Italian is very near akin to the French; as, Clemence, Clemenza; Campagne, Campagna; Equipage, Equipaggio, &c. But this holds only in some Words.

Sol, with an Article, is the Sun; without it, only.

ADJECTIVES are Masculine, bello; or Feminine, as bella; or Masculine and Feminine in one Ending; as, prudente.

An Adjective is us'd sometimes for a Substantive; as, il caldo, for il calore.

Those in o and e make the Plural in i.

Grande is gran, in both Numbers and Genders; but sometimes grandi in the Plural, before a Vowel; as, grandi anime, or anime grandi.

Those in a make the Plural e: And they are all declin'd like the Substantives, and agree with them in Case, Gender and Number.

L in Latin, after f, b, p, is turn'd into i; as, flos, fiore.

C or p before t is turn'd into t; as, doctor, dottore: Ih into f, as filosofo: X into f, or cc; as, Xerxes, Serse; excellens, eccellente.

Buono, bello, santo, uno, grande, quello, before Masculine Substantives beginning with a Consonant, must be said and written, buon', bell, sant', un', grand', quell'.

Before Feminines beginning with a Confonant, they are buona, bella, santa, una, gran, quella.

Before Substantives beginning with a Vowel, they are, buon', bell', sant', un', grand', quell'.

So Frate; as, Fra Paolo, Brother Paul.

Augmentatives end in one, or otto, or ame; as, Huomo, Huomone, a Great Man.

To express something despicable, the last Letter is chang'd into accio or accia; as, Hucmaccia, an ugly Man; Domaccia, an ugly Woman.

Diminutives of Flattery end in ino, etto, ello, ina, essa, essa, etta, ella: Of Pity and Mockery, end in uccio, uzzo, icivolo, uccia, uzza, icivola.

More might be said of the different Senses of Words, by the Endings; but this must be referr'd to the Distinuary.

In Comparing, the Comparative is form'd by these words, with che, or the Article of the Genitive aster them: Più, via or vie, più, assai or molto più; meno, meglio, megliore; peggio, peggiore. As, Più dotto del vostro, more learned than your's.

But if the Possessive Pronoun be follow'd by a Noun of Quality or Parentage, di must be us'd instead of the Genitive Article, in the Singular, tho' not in the Plural. As, Più grande di vostra Altezza, greater than your Highness; but, delle Eccellenze loro, than your Excellence.

Comparatives of Quantity are made by quanto: As, Roma non è riccha quanto Londra; Rome is not so rich as London.

When two Substantives, Adjectives, or Verbs, are one after another, the Comparison is made by che: Più Gratia che Bellezza, More Grace than Beauty.

Superlatives are form'd by changing the last Letter into is mo, is ma, is mi, is me; as, bellif smo.

Stesso, stessa, are often join'd to se, me, te, lui, ella; and medesimo, medesima, to me, te, lui, ella, in both Numbers.

Istesso, istessa, are the entire words.

Me, after the Imperative, is express'd by mi; as, mandate mi. With me, is meco.

Noi, after the Imperative, is express'd by ci; as, parlate ci: Te by ti; as, contenta ti: Voi by vi; as, vestite vi.

With thee, is teco: With him, or her, seco, or con lui; con lex for the Feminine: With them, con loro, or con est: Con este for the Feminine.

Esso is plac'd with con; and noi, voi, si, loro, lei. As, Con esso noi, along with us.

PRONOUNS Conjunctive

Are always join'd to a Verb:

Mi, ti, si, gli, gliele, gliene, le, ci, cene, vi, ve-

Loro never changes.

Mi, ti, si, ci, vi, if lo, la, li, le follow, change i into e; as, date me lo, send it to us.

Gli before lo, la, li, le, or the Adverb ne, takes e after i; as, glielo, not glilo.

These Pronouns are transpos'd after the Infinitive and Gerund; as, per dirmi, not per me dire, to tell me: Scrivendo velo, not velo scrivendo.

Loro is always fit after the Verb; as, parlo loro.

These Pronouns, mi, ti, si, ci or ne, vi, have the same Signification as à me, à tè, à sè, &c.

PRONOUNS Possessive

Are declin'd like Adjectives; Il mio, i miei; Il tuo, suo, nostro, vostro, loro. La mia, le mie; le tue, &c.

Il mio, il tuo, &c. by it self, is, my or thy Estate, &c. I nostri, vostri, &c. is, my or thy Friends, Domesticks, &c.

Loro is us'd either to Men or Women.

Loro, before a Verb, is a Pronoun Conjunctive Before a Noun, it is a Possessive; and it needs no Article to the Genitive and Dative: As, parlarate loro; not à loro; you shall speak to them.

PRONOUNS Demonstrative

Are, Questo, questo qui, this; Qual, or quello, questo li, that: Questa, questi, queste, &c. Ciò.

Costui, colui, for the Masculine; Costei, colei, for the Feminine, when you speak of a Thing animate: In the Plural, Costoro, coloro.

All these Pronouns are declin'd with di, à, dà.

as Persons. So questo, questa.

The Article before Costúi, colúi, costéi, coléi, belongs properly to the word following: As, Il costúi amore, this Man's Love; that is, L'amore di questo. But this Phrase is not frequent, nor civil.

Cotestui, cotestei, cotesto, cotesta, are us'd as ca-

In quello, or quella, is, in the mean while, or, then, when.

Il, del, al, dal, is never join'd to questo or quello; nor la, della, alla, dalla, to questa or quella.

Costui, costei, costoro, colui, colei, coloro, are us'd only in the End of a Phrase, and by way of Slight.

For Elegancy, we use cotessi, questi, and quegli, in the Singular, for questo, questo. As, Questi sù saggio, quegli sù imprudente: This was wise; this was unwise.

PRONOUNS Interrogative.

Chi, Who? Di, à, da, chi or cui.

Che, Qual, What? Di, à, dà, che or qual: In the Plural, che, or quali. But che is more us'd than qual.

PRONOUNS Relative.

Che, who; Il quale, which: Del quale, la qua-

Il quale, la quale, &c. are always express'd by

When the Relative is of the Genitive, Dative, or Ablative Singular, cui is us'd with its Article, ii, à, dà: As, Il cui, or, il di cui Volto; Whose Face.

Quello. Plu. Quelli, or quei.

The Particles, Dove, vi, ne, which signify where, wherein; there, in it, of it; of it, some, any; are often us'd like Relative Pronouns. As, Dove io poss, Wherein I can. V'è una Camera? Is there a Chamber? N'hanno più d'ella, They have more than her.

What is sometimes express'd by il che.

PRONOUNS Indefinite.

Uno, altro, qualche, &c. qualsi voglia, qualcunque sii, ogn' uno, tutti, &c. lo stesso, medesimo, medemo-desima-desima-desimi-desime-desime-deme, self, selves.

Note, Ogni and qualche ought never to be put before the Plural, but alcuni, alcune: As, alcune Donne, not ogni Donne, every Woman.

Lo, del, al, dal, do not properly belong to altrui, when set with it, but to the word following: As, L'altrui potère, another's Power: Il potère di altri.

Altrii is of all Genders and Numbers.

Altri is often put in a Singular Sense, sor any one: As, Se altri non vuole, unless one will.

Chi signifies often one, a body, any body: And if repeated, some.

Nothing must be added to qualcun, or qualchedun, some one. For it is absurd to say, Qualcun huomo, &c.

So it is with ogn' un.

Nisumo, veruno, no one.

Non join'd to nulla, or niente, denies the more. As, Non voglio niente, I will have nothing.

If you forbid, the Particle precedes: As, Non vi accostate; Come not near. Else it follows; as, accostatevi.

Il, him, is set before; as, il viddi, I saw him.

35 7 58	Infinitive, are.
32 - 26	The Second, ere.
SCOCOCOC	HE First Conjugation hath in the Infinitive, are. The Second, ere. The Third, ire.

The Verbs, Havere, to have, Essere, to be, are call'd Auxiliary Verbs; because they help to conjugate others in the Perfect Tense, and in the first and second Pluperfect, in the Indicative and Subjunctive, or Conjunctive Mood, in all Conjugations.

The Tenses of essere, not havere, are set before the Participle stato; as, sono stato, &c.

Venire, with its Tenses, is us'd often for essere; as, viene stimato, for è stimato, he is esteem'd.

The Verb havere is always written with an b in all Tenses, for Distinction from other like words; as, hebbi, I had; Ebbi, Dwarf-Eldar.

Havere. Indicative.

Present. Sing. Io bò, tu bai, egli bà. Plu. Noi habbiamo, voi bavete, eglino banno.

Imperfect. havevo--evi--eva. Pl. --evamo--evate--

Perfect. hebbi, havesti, hebbe. Pl. havemmo-este, hebbero.

Or, bo bavuto, bai bavuto, &c.

Pluperfect. havevo havuto, havevi bavuto, &c. Or, hebbi havuto, &c.

The Participle is Masculine or Feminine, as the Substantive requires.

Future. baverò;--rài--rà remo--rete--ranno. Or, haurò, haurài, haurà, &c. Or, havrò, &c.

Imperative.

Habbi, habbia, --iamo--iate--iamo.

Subjunctive.

Pres. habbia-bia --bia --biamo-biate-biano.

Imp. havesti-este-este-este-estero.
Or, haverei-resti-rebbe (or, haveria havria, hauria,-havréi-haréi) --remo-reste-rebbero, orriano.

Perf. habbia havuto, &c.

Plup. havest havuto, &c. Or, haverei have to, &c.

Fut. haverd havnto, &c.

Infinitive.

Pres. havere. Perf. havere havuto.

Fut. havere ad havere, essere per havere, dovere havere; to be about to have.

Gerund. havendo, coll'havere, nell'havere, or in havendo havuto.

Havendo ad havere, essendo per havere, dovendo havere; being about to have.

Participle. havuto--ta--ti--te.

Havere with dà is us'd for dovere; as, hò dà fare, I ought to do.

Esfere. Indicative.

Or, Sarci-resti-rebbe, or ria, --remmo--reste--rebbero, or riano.

Perfect.

Sia flato, sia or sii stato, &c.

Pluperf.

Fost stato, &c. Or, Sarei flato, &c.

Future.

Saro fato, &c.

No Tenses of bavére must be put before stato; as, sono stato, not bò stato.

Infinitive.

Pres. Essere. Perf. Esser stato. Gerund, Essendo, essendo stato. Participle, Stato-ta-ti-te.

Participle. Gerund. ato, ando, uto, endo,

ito. endo.

Con, cell', nell', in, before the Infinitive, is a Gerund.

The Common People often say godere for godere, &c. And at Rome, they say amassimo, for amammo, and the like. Some Grammarians make Four Conjugations, but without Reason.

The Florentines commonly say, voi dicevi, for dicevate; and the like. This is faulty.

The Calabrians and Neapolitans say, havemo, se-mo, &c. from the Spanish, instead of the true Italian, habbiamo, siamo, &cc. This must be avoided.

This may serve for all the Regular Conjuga-

The Auxiliary Tenses are thus, with havere, or essere, and the Participle of each.

2 Perf. hò amato, &c. Plup. havevo amato, or hebbi amato. Subj. Perf. habbia amato, &c. Plup. havessi, or haverei amato. Fut. haverò amato. Infin. Perf. aver amato. 2 Gerund, havendo amato.

So all the rest.

Verbs in care and gare take h before c and g in some Tenses; as, pecchi, pecchiamo; paghi, paghiamo, peccherò, &c. pagherò, &c. pecchi, &c. paghi, &c. pecchi, &c. paghi, &c. peccheréi, &c. pagheréi, &c.

Verbs of the Second Conjugation end in ere, short or long; as, ricevère, godére.

In the Third, molire and salire have in the Present Tense moro, or moio, salgo or saglio.

Aprire, coprire, have in the Perfect, apprii' and apersi', coprii' and copersi': And the Participles of them are, aperto, coperto.

The Present Tense of most Verbs of the Third Conjugation ends in isco.

The Present Indicative is form'd of the Infinitive, by turning ere, are, ire, into o; as, vincere, virco; &c. But this Rule is not universal; as, parere, paio; trabere, traggo, and many others.

Some Verbs have the Infinitive three ways; as, trahere, trarre, trar; cogliere, corre, cor; ponere, porre, por; conducere, condurre, condur; and the like.

So the Persons of many are varied; as, traggiamo, or trahiamo, traggo or traho, &c.

The Compounds of sumere, which is out of use, make the Perfect sunsi, and the Participle sunto; as, assumere, assumer, assumer.

The Subjunctive of Verbs in ere, ire, is form'd of the first Person Indicative, by turning o into a; as, simire, simisco, simisca. Except essere, sapere, havére, dovére.

The forming of the other Tenses is easy, from the Examples above recited.

CHAP. V.

Irregular VERBS of the Three Conjugations.

I. Dare, Fare, Stare, Andare.

The Irregular Verbs ends in two Vowels; as, amai: The Irregular have a Consonant before the last Vowel; as, hebbi.

1. Dare. Indic. Pres.

Do, dài, dà, diamo, date, danno.

Imperf. davo, davi, &c.

Perf. detti, desti, dette, diede, demmo, dieste, dettero. diede, diede, diede, diedero.

hò dato, havevo dato, hebbi dato, &c.

The Poets use dier, dieron, dierono, for dettero, or diedero.

Fut. darò--rài--rà --remo--rete--ranno.

Imperative.

Da, dia, diamo, date, diano.

Subjunctive. Pres.

Dis, Es, dia, diamo-ate-ano.

Imp. dest, deste, desse, desteno, deste, dessero.

Or, darei,-resti-rebbe --remmo--reste--rebbero.

havesti, bavero, } dato.

Gerund, dando.

2. Fare. Indic.

Pres. Fò, fai, fà, facciamo, fate, fanno.

Imp. facevo, -evi, &c.

Subjunctive. Pres.

Vada, vadi, zvada, andiamo-diate, vadino.

Imperf. andassi-dassi, &c. Or, anderei,-resti, &c.

sia, sarei, fandato, andare, andando.

à or ad must be set after andare besore au Insinitive; as, andate à dire, &c.

The Tenses of andare are often us'd with the Gerund of another Verb, to express the Sense of that Verb; as, Và dicendo, He says.

à or ad must be set after all Verbs of Motion, before an Infinitive; as, Venite à vedere, Come see.

4. Stare. Indic.

Pres. Stò, stai, stà, stiamo, state, sianno.

Imp. flavo-avi, &c.

Perf. stetti, stesti, stette, stemmo-este-ettero.

Sono, ero, fui flato.

Fut. flarò-rai, &c.

- Imperative.

N. B. Apparisco, comparisco, offerisco, proserisco, make the Persect, apparii and apparsi, comparii and comparsi, offerii and offersi, proserei and prosersi; and the Participles, apparso, comparso, offerto, proserto.

AGRAMMAR

Some end both in are and ire; as, colorare, co-lorire.

Some Verbs, especially in the Poets, have two Endings in the Present Tense; as, offro, offerisco; mento, mentisco; soffro, sofferisco; converto, conzertisco; &c.

Some Moods and Tenses of all Conjugations are contracted; as, bévere, bére. And the Contracts are more us'd than the words at Length.

CHAP. VI.

VERES Reciprocal, Passive, Impersonal, Particles, &c.

HE Reciprocal Verbs have si after the Infinitive; and mi, ti, si, in the Singular, and ci, vi, si, in the Plural, going along with them.

The Compound Tenses are form'd by the Verb Eser. And all Verbs Active may be reciprocal: As, Mi meraviglio, ti meravigli, si meraviglia, ci meravigliamo, vi meravigliate, si meravigliano, &c.

Some are reciprocal with Particles; as, Io mi fido di pochi.

Passives are form'd by the Participle and the Verb Essere; as, Sono amato.

Verbs Absolute, which are akin to Neuters, are conjugated by Havere, not Essere: As, Io hò corso, I have run.

But some are excepted.

Impersonals are form'd only in the Third Person Singular; as, Bisogna, It behoveth.

Mi,

46

Mi, ti, gli, le, ci, vi, loro, are often join'd to them; as, Dispiace mi, I am angry; or, It displeaseth me. Dispiacendo ti, Thou being angry.

Impersonals are us'd either with, or without Particles.

Si makes an Impersonal in some measure, or rather a Passive. If it comes before, it is written apart; if after, it is incorporated with the Verb, and the Vowel of the Verb is lost: As, Si loda, or lodass; si lodano, or lodassi. And here, when si is transpos'd after a Tense that is accented, the Accent is taken away, and two $\int \int$ are put; as, $\int \int_{-\infty}^{\infty} amo, amos$ si.

Si must always be set after mi, ti, gli, le, ci, vi, loro: As, Vi si scrive, They write to you.

This may be express'd better by Viene and a Participle; as, for Mi si scrive, They write to me, Mi viene scritto.

Si never comes before Infinitives, Gerunds, or Participles, unless non or ne comes just before it.

There is, There was, is express'd by C'è, or V'è, C'era, or V'era, &c. But Ci and Vi, when they mark the Time, are not express'd: As, There is a Year, è un' Anno; not, C'è un Anno.

Ci speaks of the Place near, Vi. the more diffrant.

If the Place and the Adverb are in the same Phrase, Vi is not express'd: As, There are many Doctors in the College; Sono molti Dottori nel Colleggio. If in two Phrases, it must be express'd: As, I have been in the Council, there was a Senatore.

When the Adverbs Ci and Vi denote the Place. they have ne after them, which denotes a Relation to the Thing in that Place. As, Is there Money in your Pocket? C'è Denaro nella vostra. Saccocia? Si, Signore, cen'è; Yes, Sir, there is.

Ven' è, There is : Vene sono, &c.

Participles are often contracted; as, acconciato, acconcio, &c.

Are makes the Participle in ato: ere in uto, so or to: ire in ito, so or to.

Adverbs may be found in the Distionary, and are form'd chiefly in mente; as, presentemente, now.

Prepositions govern the Genitive, Dative, or Accusative Cases.

Se, If, requires an Imperfect after it, Indicative or Subjunctive: As, Se bavefi. Che requires the Subjunctive: Se ben, the Indicative; Ben che, the Subjunctive.

Qual, not being an Interrogative, requires a Subjunctive; else an Indicative.

The Gerunds are expressed two ways: 1. Havendolo veduto, Having seen it: Essendesene accorto, Being aware of it. 2. Veduto lo; Accorto-sene.

The Nominative should be set aster the Gerund; as, Essendo il Rè alla caccia.

Del, della, dei, de', after the Verb, express Part of a Thing: As, Date mi del Pane, Give me some Bread. Never a whole Thing; as, Conosco Huomini, I know Men.

After Si; del, dello, &c. are not express'd; nor after Prepositions: except thus; Si parla di voi, &c.

The Italians, like the English, use always the Second Person Plural, when they speak but to one Person: As, Voi, Signore, bavete, You, Sir, have.

They we the Third Person Singular, instead of the Second Plural: As, Vossignoria (written by V. S.) parla, You speak. On for V. S. they we Ella, or Lei; as, Ella intende, You understand: But commonly in the Plural, Le Signorie loro.

So, Ler' altri, or altre, Signori, or ---re, You Gentlemen and Ladies. Di loro, Your's, or, your Servant.

Ci and Vi are Conjunctive Pronouns, express'd by Noi and Voi; and are also Adverbs of Place.

Li and La, without the Accent, are Articles; with it, are Adverbs of Place.

The Adverbs Qui and Quà are put thus: Qui, with Verbs of Quiet, as, Sono qui: Quà, with Verbs of Motion, as, Venite quà.

Yes and No, after Verbs, are express'd by Di, and Di no.

In Interrogations, the Pronoun is set after the Verb; as, Hà egli? Or rather, not express'd.

In, before Nouns of Number marking Time, is express'd by Frà; as, Frà due Mesi, In two Months: Not marking Time, by In; as, In due Fiaschi, In two Bottles.

The Infinitive is us'd for a Substantive; as, L' Amare, Love; Del Giuocare, of Game. And for a Gerund; as, Nel morire, for morendo.

A, all', al, allo, alla, ai, a', agli, alli, alle, with a Verb of Privation, fignify From: As do gli, li, le, mi, ti, si, ci, vi, me, te, se, ce, ve, ne. Thus Hà levato al Inmico, He has taken from the Enemy, Da, dal, da', dalli, dagli, dalla, dalle, after a Verb of Motion, before a Person to whom the Motion is intended, signify To, or At. As, Andate dal Medico, Go to the Physician. Da noi, voi, loro, &c. At our, your, their House, &c. So dal Principe, dal Signor Abbate, &c. at the Prince's, at the Abbot's, &c.

Di is not express'd after Adverbs of Quantity; as, Quanto Tempo,

Gran is often, a great deal of; Poco di, a lit-

Hoggi is sometimes Afternoon, or after Dinner; as, Venite boggi, Come after Dinner.

Pur is often us'd for Ornament; as, Dite pur quel che vi piacerà: Or in repeating; as, Andate pur, Go, go.

The Ablative Case in the Latin is commonly the Nominative in Italian; except Ghianda, Virtù, &c.

For in is often us'd trà, or frà.

The Accent of Verbs is sometimes alter'd in the Italian from the Latin: As, Cadere, cadére; Ardère, ardere; &c.

The Particles may be known mostly by what has been said: As, Mi battè, Battemmi, He struck me. Mi ci sermái, Fermáimici, I staid there. And the like.

More than, before words of Time, is made by Più, at the End. As, It is more than ten Years; Sono dieci Anni è più.

These Particles, De, è, egli, ci, hen, ne, già, pur, me, che, il, are often us'd in no Sense, but by way of Ornament.

A Specimen of the Italian Proverbs may be these: Honor di bocca assai vale, poco costa. Pec-cato celato mezo perdonato.

of the Italian Tongue.

And of their Phrases, or Idioms; Lo facevo da Scherzo, I did it only to raise Laughter.

The different Senses of many Verbs, as Dare, Fare, &c. occasion a great Variety of Idioms: So do Particles.

Their Manner of Address in their Letters is particular, and must be learn'd from Use, as to Superscriptions, Compellation, Sc. with the Abbreviations of words in them: As, Affio, affetto; V. A. Serma, Vostra Altezza Serenissima, &c.
